The Honorable Barry M. Goldwater, Chairman
Select Committee on Intelligence
United State Senate
Washington, D.C. 20510

Dear Mr. Chairman:

Given your Committee's strong interest in strengthening this nation's counterintelligence capabilities against hostile intelligence threats confronting the United States, I would like to bring you up to date on what we have been doing toward that end.

Following up on Senator Wallop's Budget Subcommittee's report, we have initiated an in-depth study of how best to meet the needs of the United States Government for multidisciplinary counterintelligence analysis. Concurrently, we are also forming, as your Committee recommended, an Advisory Commission to take a parallel look at this same question and come up with recommendations. We are now consulting with the Secretary of Defense, the Attorney General and the FBI to select the Commission members. Terms of reference for the study have been drafted. I fully expect to complete both of these studies and submit them to the Committee by the requested date of 15 November 1983.

Meanwhile, to improve multidisciplinary counterintelligence analysis throughout the Community, I am establishing a new Intelligence Community Committee on Hostile Intelligence Threat Analysis. The Committee will be chaired by the Chief of the Intelligence Community Counterintelligence Staff and will include members from all elements of the Community, including the Military Services. This Committee will assist and advise me in improving how we assess, analyze, evaluate and report on the totality of hostile intelligence threats against the United States.

As you know, we have established the Foreign Intelligence Capabilities Group in the CIA Directorate of Intelligence, and I hope to augment this Group and its analytical capabilities during FY 1984. The work of this Group exemplifies the type of multidisciplinary analysis I am seeking and your Committee is advocating. By strengthening this Group and by forming the new Committee on Hostile Intelligence Threat Analysis, I hope to focus attention on and give support to other counterintelligence and countermeasures analytical improvements throughout the Community.

The Interagency Groups for Counterintelligence and for Countermeasures (IG/CI and IG/CM) have continued their work in support of the Senior Interagency Group for Intelligence (SIG-I) to implement the numerous recommendations included in the NSSD-2 study on "Capabilities Against the Hostile Intelligence Threat, 1983-1988." We are making good progress on the policy and legal actions recommended, and have either incorporated in the FY 1984 budget request or are developing for the FY 1985 budget request essentially all of the resource enhancements recommended in the study.

We have disseminated Terms of Reference for the 1983 annual Hostile Intelligence Services Multidisciplinary Threat and U.S. Countermeasures Assessment. We intend to publish this assessment by 1 December 1983 and will, of course, provide you a copy.

Your continued interest in and support of these efforts is a source of encouragement that we are on the right track and will succeed in making substantial improvements. I will continue to keep you informed as we progress in these endeavors of mutual concern.

Sincerely,

William J. Casey

Dear Bill:

Thank you for your letter of June 22, 1983, regarding counter-intelligence. I was out of town over the Fourth of July recess, and only just now had a chance to read your remarks.

Bill, I am glad to hear that you are working to implement a plan to strengthen the Nation's counterintelligence capabilities against hostile intelligence threats. In particular, I am pleased to hear that you are establishing a new Intelligence Community Committee on Hostile Intelligence Threat Analysis which will be Chaired by the Chief of the Intelligence Community Counterintelligence Staff. This seems to be an important step forward. [By placing the Chief of the Intelligence Community Counterintelligence Staff in charge of this Committee, you make a clear statement that no single agency with responsibility for counterintelligence is being favored over any other agency in pursuit of this important issue.]

Once again, thank you for updating me on what you have been doing in the counterintelligence area. It is extremely important, and I hope you will keep us informed on these matters as you progress.

Sincerely,

Barry
